Leader's Instructions:

1. Photocopy enough of the four different discussion sheets so that you have a sheet for every four to six participants.
2. Divide participants into small groups of four to six each.
3. Read out the Audience's Instructions.
4. Give each group a Bible and one of the four discussion sheets on which they will work.
5. After ten minutes, bring the groups back together to share their conclusions using the Discussion and Application section below.

Audience's Instructions:

For this discussion, you need to imagine you are Jur young people living in Sudan. The Jur number about 40,000 and live way out in the country with no towns or shops anywhere, no electricity and no city water supply. Their work involves growing food, hunting for meat and gathering honey and edible plants in the woods. Their social life revolves around family and consists of talking, making music together, visiting friends and going to church.

I will give each group a Discussion Sheet and Bible. The sheet describes real situations faced by Jur young people. Read the scenario aloud, putting yourself in the shoes of the person described. Then discuss the questions which follow. The Bible references will help you decide what to do. Try to agree upon a course of action in your group. What would you do? What would Jesus do? Choose wisely!

Discussion and Application:

1. Invite each group to briefly summarize their situation and explain why they made the decision that they did. Then discuss the following questions:
  - What did you notice about the situations that the Jur young people face? (Hint* Is it so different from issues you face?)

Alcoholism, fortune telling, sexual impurity and slander are as relevant to teenagers in the United States as they are to Jur young people. Amazing that the nature of man is so consistent no matter where you go around the world!

- What factors did you consider when you made your decisions?
Mature Christians, as well as mature churches look for answers in the Bible.

- How do you think a Jur person would go about making similar sorts of decisions?

Discussing these issues was easier for us because we have Bibles which tell us how to apply our faith to everyday situations. The root problem for the Jur people was that when they faced these issues, they did not have the Bible in their own language. They could not find out what God wanted them to do. They could either base their decision on the advice of a foreign missionary or copy what they saw other Christians doing. But they could not study the Bible and make their own decision based on God's wisdom.

- Are there things that may be wrong for Christians of one country, but permissible for Christians of another?

Take the song-singing, for instance. In another country where there are no course jokes, fighting or injury related to traditional songs, then the people need not insist that their brothers in Christ stop singing them.

Closing Prayer Time:

We who have the Scriptures often take for granted all the wisdom and spiritual blessing it has brought us. Encourage the group to take turns thanking God for some portion of Scripture or some concept the Bible has taught them. Short sentence prayers are best and free everyone to quote a verse or name a blessing without having to be too eloquent!

Update:

The Jur church began in 1955. With the Scriptures, it is growing quickly and expanding into areas where there were previously no known Christians. The New Testament (1998) and parts of the Old Testament have now been translated into the Jur language. At long last they, too, can choose wisely!

Bitter Choices

Wisley does not know what to do. Tea is so expensive these days and he's hardly got any money left. How will he find money to buy enough for his guests? It's not long until Christmas when all his relations will visit and expect him to entertain them for several days. Sugar is a problem too. All Jur people take lots of sugar in their tea, but there is a shortage at the moment and none is available in town. The area is too dry to grow either tea or sugar.

Before becoming Christians, all Jur people drank beer. Drunkenness was common and fights would often break out.

To prevent this, the Christians started serving tea instead of beer. Wisley can easily make beer from the grain which he grows in his fields and it won't cost him anything. Even though he is a Christian, maybe this would be his best option since apart from water, there are no other drinks available. No one would dream of only serving water to their guests!

1. What should Wisley do? Choose wisely! (No pun intended!)
2. What good reasons can you see for not serving beer? (Romans 14:13-17)
3. What should a Christian's attitude toward alcohol be? (Ephesians 5:18)

Change of Fortune

Eliya does not know what to do. His three-year-old son is seriously ill and there are no doctors or hospitals nearby. As a result of the civil war, there are no medicines for sale either.

The Jur people believe that there are many spirits in the world which cause both good and bad fortune. They always consult fortune tellers when magic power is needed for successful hunting, or for safety on long journeys. The Jur also believe that only a fortune teller can tell them which spirit is responsible for a particular illness and how to get rid of it. Eliya's wife wants him to take their son to a well-known fortune teller in the next village, but Eliya has become a Christian and isn't sure whether he should or not.

1. What should Eliya do? Choose wisely!
2. What does the Bible have to say about fortune telling? (Deuteronomy 18: 9-13)
3. If he doesn't take his child to the fortune teller, what could he do instead? (James 5:13-14)

Boys Like Girls

Maria doesn't know what to do. Three young men have arrived in her village from a village 25 miles away. Everyone knows what that means. Jur are not allowed to marry someone they are related to, however distantly, so men often have to look for wives in far-off areas. Jur custom is for the older teenage girls to host a party for the visitors. They clean out a room, put several beds in it and invite other girls from their village to come along. In theory these parties are just opportunities for young people to get to know one another. However, very often they lead to more, and girls end up pregnant.

Some of Maria's family have become Christians and teach the young people that these kind of parties are wrong. Maria doesn't want to upset her family, but on the other hand, if she doesn't go, how will she meet a husband? Not getting married is the most shameful thing that could happen to any Jur woman.

1. Should Maria go to the party? Choose wisely!
2. What does the Bible say about sex between people who are not married to each other? (1 Corinthians 6:18-20)
3. What should a Christian be looking for in a future husband or wife? (2 Corinthians 6:14-17)

To Sing or Not to Sing

Some young Jur Christians in the Domeri village don't know what to do. They are arguing about traditional Jur songs that are sung when crowds gather together for events like weddings or funerals. On such occasions, the young people from different villages take turns performing songs they make up. These songs boast about successes in hunting and make coarse jokes about people of other villages. Naturally the rival villagers respond with even more insulting songs. Quite often this makes people angry enough to start a fight. Since the Jur people always carry spears with them for protection against wild animals, fights can result in bloodshed and even murder.

Many of the Christians think they should give up their traditional songs for this reason. Others say, "How can we give up something which everyone does? It would be unsociable not to join in. We just have to make sure there's no fighting."

1. What should they do? Choose wisely!
2. What does the Bible say about making jokes at other people's expense? (Colossians 3:8)
3. How could the Jur Christians better spend their time together but still sing? (Ephesians 5:19-20)
