If you're reading this, chances are you're considering working in missions. Our hope is that this brochure will provide answers to the questions you're asking as you carefully consider if missions is right for you. Whether you're interested in Wycliffe Bible Translators specifically, or just looking into different opportunities and organizations, we hope to offer guidance and insight that will better equip you to answer the question, Is this for me?

We also hope you'll be able to use this as a guide for self-reflection and evaluation as you consider missions work. There are a lot of things to think about, and we can help you ask and answer the right questions! No matter where you are in the process, there are steps you can take right now to get yourself and your family ready to enter the mission field. Wycliffe created this guide to help make that process as easy as possible.

SEEK GOD FIRST

Am I ready to accept God's leading for my life?

Therefore, go and make disciples of all the nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father and the Son and the Holy Spirit. Teach these new disciples to obey all the commands I have given you. And be sure of this: I am with you always, even to the end of the age.

— Matthew 28:19–20 (NLT)

God doesn't call us to be comfortable. He calls us to trust Him so completely that we are unafraid to put ourselves in situations where we will be in trouble if He doesn't come through. — Francis Chan, "Crazy Love"

Thinking about missions often begins with questions about God's will and how that calling might involve serving in various capacities. By first drawing close to God, you can better understand his desires for your life. This is crucial when you're trying to determine where and how he is leading you to serve.

There will be times in your service when you will be acutely aware of your dependence on God to sustain you. Remind yourself to live that way now, spending ample time in prayer and worship, and you'll already have a habit of looking to him for guidance when times of difficulty or uncertainty surface.

Study the Bible diligently and often. Don't just read, but learn to listen as God speaks to you through it. Regularly attend a church or Bible study where you can interact with other Christians, worship God together, study the Bible and serve others. This is vital to hearing and following God's leading.

QUESTIONS TO CONSIDER:

- What am I doing to strengthen my relationship with God?
- How am I relying on God to lead me right now?
- In what ways am I growing in my understanding of the Bible?

Next steps:

- ✓ PRAY for God's work around the world, including those communities still waiting for a Bible in their language. Select a specific group of people to pray for, or start a prayer group to pray for multiple language groups or areas of the world.

- ✓ STUDY the Bible and make a habit of memorizing Scripture verses. For both missionaries and people here in the United States, biblical literacy is critical to a growing relationship with God.

- ✓ WORSHIP with a local church or community of other Christians. As we spend time focusing on God and his love for us, we begin to love people in other countries the same way he does.

- ✓ SUPPORT missionaries and their work financially through your local church or other ministries. Celebrate Christ's sacrifice for you by sacrificing some of your stuff for other people.

SEEK SOLID RELATIONSHIPS

Can others see Christ at work in my life?

You are the light of the world — like a city on a hilltop that cannot be hidden. No one lights a lamp and then puts it under a basket. Instead, a lamp is placed on a stand, where it gives light to everyone in the house. In the same way, let your good deeds shine out for all to see, so that everyone will praise your heavenly Father. — Matthew 5:14–16 (NLT)

The point of your life is to point to Him. Whatever you are doing, God wants to be glorified, because this whole thing is His. — Francis Chan, "Crazy Love"

Make friends with people who share your faith, moral standards and excitement about missions, including an older, wiser person who is knowledgeable about missions and can guide and encourage you. Spend your time together in prayer and Bible study.

It's also a good idea to meet with missionaries who are willing to share their experience. Additionally, being able to build and maintain a network of meaningful relationships with people of various doctrinal, ethnic and cultural backgrounds is important when working closely with others in missions. These relationships will help you learn to communicate with and relate better to many types of people. Look for ways to develop flexibility in your relationships.

QUESTIONS TO CONSIDER:

- Do I have healthy, God-honoring relationships with the people in my family?
- Am I looking for mentors who can walk me through the process of becoming a missionary?
- Am I living, and committed to continue living, a lifestyle in which serving God is more important than my comfort?

Next steps:

- ✓ FIND missionaries to connect with and make friends with other people who are interested in missions.
- ✓ PRAY for God's leading in all relationships.
- ✓ SHARE your faith and your interest in missions work with people who don't know Jesus.

SIMPLIFY YOUR LIFESTYLE

Am I living within my means?

Don't store up treasures here on earth, where moths eat them and rust destroys them, and where thieves break in and steal. Store your treasures in heaven, where moths and rust cannot destroy, and thieves do not break in and steal. Wherever your treasure is, there the desires of your heart will also be. — Matthew 6:19–21 (NLT)

I have held many things in my hands, and I have lost them all. But whatever I have placed in God's hands, that I still possess. — Martin Luther

One way you can prepare for missions work is by learning to be content living with less so you'll be free to go when God calls. That includes avoiding new debt and eliminating any existing debts. Credit card and school debt delay many people from serving in missions. Don't lose focus; keep yourself on a budget that allows you to be a good steward of your finances, use extra cash to pay down what you owe and consider schooling options that won't leave you in debt for years to come.

Also, many organizations require their staff to raise some or all of the funds they need before starting their job in missions. This can be intimidating, but it doesn't need to be. One way to make it easier is to begin developing relationships now with people who might be willing to support you in your ministry later. But it's important to have finances settled before moving toward ministry opportunities. Depending on God to provide for your financial needs through the partnership of other Christians can seem daunting, but it's an opportunity to see him work in ways that will grow your faith.

QUESTIONS TO CONSIDER:

- Do I have any financial burdens (student loans, credit card debt, home mortgage, etc.) that would make it difficult to serve right now?
- How am I currently using my money? Am I planning for the future and being responsible, or am I spending it as soon as I earn it?
- Have I built and maintained good relationships with people who may want to invest in me if I become a missionary?

Next steps:

- ✓ WORK on eliminating or reducing debt.
- ✓ FIND biblically-based financial resources to help you make the best choices you can with the money God gives you.
- ✓ ASK God to help you get to know people who will want to pray for you and help support your ministry financially.

GET INFORMED

How do I find out more about specific areas of the world where I can serve or organizations that might be a good fit for me?

If the whole body were an eye, how would you hear? Or if your whole body were an ear, how would you smell anything? But our bodies have many parts, and God has put each part just where he wants it. How strange a body would be if it had only one part! Yes, there are many parts, but only one body. — 1 Corinthians 12:17–20 (NLT)

*I have but one passion — it is he, it is he alone. The world is the field and the field is the world; and henceforth that country shall be my home where I can be most used in winning souls for Christ.
— Count Zinzendorf*

Keep an eye on what is happening in the world and in missions through news articles, credible missions blogs and other sources. As a missionary, it's important to be aware of the big picture. Plus — you never know — God just might lead you to an area of the world or a type of work you'd never have thought of on your own!

It also helps to read biographies of missionaries who have already gone to the places you might want to serve. Their stories can help you learn what God is already doing in people's lives in that area of the world and help you get an idea of the challenges you might face.

It's also important to know your options! Research multiple organizations, ask questions, attend conferences and find out who your friends and acquaintances recommend.

QUESTIONS TO CONSIDER:

- Is God calling you to a specific people group or region of the world?
- Do you share an organization's doctrinal beliefs and vision? How about their philosophy on cultural sensitivity, denominational alliances, etc.?

Next steps:

- ✓ READ missionary biographies to learn from men and women who have already been where you want to go.
- ✓ ASK your church which organizations they are working with already and get to know those organizations.
- ✓ FIND a class or learning opportunity focused on the theology of missions and the great commission, like Perspectives on the World Christian Movement, a program of the U.S. Center for World Missions.

START SERVING NOW

How can I begin serving right where I am?

God has given each of you a gift from his great variety of spiritual gifts. Use them well to serve one another. Do you have the gift of speaking? Then speak as though God himself were speaking through you. Do you have the gift of helping others? Do it with all the strength and energy that God supplies. Then everything you do will bring glory to God through Jesus Christ. All glory and power to him forever and ever! Amen. — 1 Peter 4:10-11 (NLT)

Radical obedience to Christ is not easy. ... It's not comfort, not health, not wealth, and not prosperity in this world. Radical obedience to Christ risks losing all these things. But in the end, such risk finds its reward in Christ. And He is more than enough for us. — David Platt, "Radical"

You don't need to wait until you're overseas to be a missionary. Become an active member in your local church and encourage your family to join you in serving.

Ideas to get started:

- Serve on the missions committee.
- Teach a children's class.
- Become an usher.
- Lead a prayer group.
- Reach out to international students and families in your area.

QUESTIONS TO ASK:

- Are there ways I can serve my community better?
- How can I think and act more like a missionary, starting today?
- What are my spiritual gifts? How can I use them to make a difference for the kingdom here at home and overseas?

Next steps:

- ✓ CONSIDER writing a mission statement for your life and using this to prioritize your activities.
- ✓ EVALUATE the ways you are serving others now, and ask yourself if you are really ready to make extreme sacrifices as an overseas missionary.
- ✓ LOOK for opportunities to serve your community right now, whether it's by volunteering at church or a local charity, or doing something else that God inspires you to do.

- ✓ IDENTIFY the skills God has given you and think about new ways you can use them to serve.
